

CODE OF ETHICS

- All Members and Prospective Members must maintain the highest levels of ethics within their businesses and strive for excellence in all aspects of their professions while maintaining the highest standards of professional conduct.
- The Rhode Island Wedding Group does not discriminate on the basis of race, gender, creed, national origin or sexual orientation. The Rhode Island Wedding Group will adhere to all Federal and State Laws and Regulations.
- Members must maintain the required licensing and insurance coverage for all areas of business conducted and use industry standards for all contracts and activities.
- Members must ensure that the public is protected against fraudulent practices, and promote only practices that bring credit and respect to the RIWG.
- All members must display a positive and supportive attitude of the RIWG and represent the group to the highest standard; strive to increase professional growth, knowledge and to increase personal contributions of expertise within the RIWG; and provide only the highest level of service and quality.
- Members must provide the quality of services at the prices quoted, build goodwill and trust among RIWG members and their referrals and take responsibility for following up on referrals in a timely manner.
- Members must not attempt to induce a customer to cancel a contract with another provider of the same product or service through slander or by offering monetary compensation.
- Members are expected to help foster positive relationships with other industry professionals.
- Members must uphold the RIWG Code of Ethics and adhere to the RIWG bylaws and policies.

Any questions on membership please email membership@riweddinggroup.com